SEVEN CHINESE VELMA HELPED DIE IN FLAMES BY OUTSIDERS?

Many More Feared Victims
As Fire Sweeps New York
Chinatown Area

NEW YORK, June 21 — Fire claimed seven known dead, and perhaps many more, in the heart of rickety old Chinatown today. Two ramshackle tenements in Doyer street, a narrow alley-like thoroughfare over which the house-tops seem almost to touch, were their pyres. Four alarms were sounded to save the rest of Chinatown from destruction and thousands of panic-stricken Chinese in this little remnant of the celestial republic in New York gathered to weep. All the victims were Chinese and all were unidentified. Of the 13 hurt in the blaze, three Chinese are believed dying. Five of the injured are firemen. #### 50 PERCENT OF NEEDY EXPENSE MUST BE PAID

County Director To Visit
Council This Evening
For Discussion

NEW HOUSE BILL CITED

Contract May Be Gained
For Continuation Of Existing System

D. H. Marcy, county relief director, will meet with city council, Wednesday evening, to inform members that after July 1 the city will have to provide means to care for its own relief clients.

Mr. Marcy explained that his visit will be based on the new House Bill No. 675, which provides that local relief areas are divided into two districts, one including city clients, the other needy outside clients.

The city, Mr. Marcy said, will have its choice of setting up its own relief administration department or entering into a contract with the county to have its cases handled through the county relief administration.

City clients are now handled through the county relief department. About 50 percent of the relief administered through the county department at present is for Circleville cases. If the city should wish to handle its own cases it would mean about 90 families would be transferred.

Emergency Cases Handled

The only relief orders given at present by the city are those for emergency cases, handled by Karl Herrmann, safety director. Cases that are continued on relief and are not included in the emergency class are certified to the county relief department.

At present the city pays nothing.

KIWANIANS SEEK DEPORTATION OF ALIEN AGITATORS

BOSTON, June 21—Deportation of all aliens or members of foreign organizations advocating substitution of other forms of government than democracy in the United States and Canada was urged today in a resolution adopted by 5,000 delegates at the closing session of the 23rd Kiwanis International convention.

The resolution also urged that all such organizations be compelled to file sworn statements giving names of officers, their objectives, the amount of contributions received and names of contributors.

Another resolution urged enactment of laws to prohibit union organization of government relief recipients.

An appeal to United States citizens to help bring immediate economy in government, a return to government by law against bureaucracy, and Kiwanis support of a program to prevent dissemination of salacious literature throughout the United States and Canada were contained in other resolutions adopted by acclamation.

CANNON, TEXTILE MAGNATE, FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 21 — Joe Franklin Cannon, 63, of Concord, N. C., millionaire textile manufacturer, was found dead in his bed in his suite at the Arlington hotel today. He had apparently died in his sleep.

His physician, Dr. Leonard Ellis, said that Cannon died of apoplexy. Cannon was found at 6:45 a. m. by his maid, Walter Gentry. He had been in the hotel for five weeks ago. The body was taken to his home in Concord, N. C.

Michigan Women Trade Hubbies, Divide Children Totalling 14; Move Cow

COLUMBIANVILLE, Mich., June 21—Two rural wives, one a grandmother, the other a slim woman of 27, today made a friendly swap of husbands.

They also divided up 14 children, each taking seven.

A cow was moved from one home to the other to assure the younger children of fresh milk.

Here's the lineup:

Mrs. Mildred Davis, 27, mother of four girls, is keeping house in the one-room farmhouse of Clarence June, 42.

Mrs. Edith June, 47, mother of 12, is keeping house in Columbianville for George Davis, 45.

Mrs. Davis is caring for her four little girls and three of the June children, Clarence, Clair and Herbert, all needed to help work the farm.

Mrs. June is keeping seven of her own children. Two of Mrs. June's daughters are married and don't figure in the deal.

A cow was moved from the June farm to the Davis township home.

Living two miles apart, the two families are maintaining friendly relations.

As yet there has been no divorce, but June and Mrs. Davis plan to file suits and later there will be a double wedding.

Mrs. Davis explained the set-up, saying:

"We're all perfectly happy. I love Clarence and that is all there is to it. George, my husband, is perfectly happy, too."

"It all happened quite suddenly. Edith, Clarence, George and I have been close friends since last December. We went to dances and parties together. Our children played together. We did our washing together because we, that is, George and I, lived in Columbianville and I had an electric washing machine."

"Then two weeks ago we agreed that we loved each other—that is, George and Edith and Clarence and I. So Edith went over there to keep house for George until the divorces are granted, and I came here."

"We're keeping everything straight and honest and I know the four of us will be happy this way. The neighbors have gossiped, (there was some talk of circulating a petition against the two families) but we are just honest about this thing."

Mrs. June said:

"You must understand. My married daughter is living here and everything is as it should be. The neighborhood has been up in arms but there is nothing to get excited about. The neighbors wanted to tar and feather us at first, until they understood. My friends here need have no fear that we are misbehaving."

G-AGENTS TAKE CHARGE OF HUNT FOR DUAL KILLER

HAYWARD, Wis., June 21 — Strengthening the theory that deerfooted Ray Olson is wanted for other heinous crimes besides the slaying of two deputy sheriffs, federal agents today took direct charge of the woodland hunt for the fugitive killer.

The G-men moved into the case after Olson had been identified by Sheriff George Seehueter as the kidnap-slayer of 10-year-old Charles Mattson in Tacoma, Wash. It was pointed out that federal agents would have no concern in the case if Olson was wanted solely for the double-killing which normally would be left in the hands of local authorities.

Olson's trail meanwhile was growing cold to possums as the hunt for him entered the fifth day.

MOVIE PRODUCERS WIN TIFF WITH BUND CHIEF

NEW YORK, June 21—Warner brothers were victors today in a preliminary skirmish in the $5,000,000 libel suit brought by Fritz Kuhn and the German-American Bund over a picture. Kuhn and the Bund were defeated in a temporary injunction prohibiting showing of the picture.

The suit was settled today.

The G-men moved into the case after Olson had been identified by Sheriff George Seehueter as the kidnap-slayer of 10-year-old Charles Mattson in Tacoma, Wash. TWO of the 492 graduating students at Dartmouth College were Charles Grant (left) and Bill Lee, descendants of the Northern and Southern army leaders respectively in the Civil War. The boys were roommates through the four years at the Hanover, N. H., school and claim they never had an argument. Both are from Washington, D. C.

Billion Dollar Lending Program Eyed By F.D.R.

WASHINGTON, June 21—A new $1,000,000,000 federal lending program to speed business recovery by 1940 was being drafted by the administration today.

Details of the latest government spending plan, calling for federal loans for a wide variety of self-liquidating projects, are expected to be made public later this week by President Roosevelt.

The new program was outlined by a special committee of government financial advisers after it became apparent that the record-breaking peacetime expenditures of the current fiscal year would not suffice in achieving desired business recovery levels.

The committee's program, as outlined to International News Service by a member, calls for:

1. Enlarged loans for rural rehabilitation and farm tenancy projects, particularly in the South.
2. Construction of new public roads, tunnels, and bridges.
3. Loans to railroads for purchase of rolling stock and other new equipment.
4. Enlargement of the rural electrification program.
5. Loans for public health facilities including hospital construction and sanitary work.
6. Large-scale housing construction for the low income groups.

While the President said yesterday he will not send any message to congress on the plan, it is probable the administration will request a general expansion of lending powers of various government agencies. It is also likely that congress will be asked to create at least one or more special organizations to handle portions of the program.

JERSEY TO BACK MOVE TO DRAFT PRESIDENT AGAIN

WASHINGTON, June 21—New Jersey's 32 delegates will go to the 1940 Democratic national convention with instructions to draft President Roosevelt for a third term, Senator Smathers (D) New Jersey predicted today.

Commenting on the proposed constitutional amendment to limit presidents to a single six-year term offered by Senator Burke (D) Nebraska, Smathers observed that Mr. Roosevelt was the "one Democrat" who could carry New York state. He added that Mayor La Guardia of New York City would support the President for a third term in preference to any other candidate.

NEW FRENCH SUB PLANNED

PARIS, June 21—France today planned early construction of a new submarine to replace the Phenix, which went down off Indochina last week with a heavy loss of lives.

Japs Turn Down British Appeals; Coastal Ships to Test Blockade

TIENTSIN, June 21—Japanese officials, turning down a British request, today curtly refused even to discuss any relaxation of the blockade imposed on the British and French concessions in Tientsin.

The latest rebuff came when the chief staff officer of the British garrison asked through the Japanese consulate general for an interview with the chief Japanese staff officer—who is in charge of the ring of sentries around the concessions.

But Japanese Consul Kunugi, according to semi-official Japanese sources, reminded the British officer that there "would be no use" in the interview "if it was decided to discuss the questions of Japanese concessions in Tientsin."

Probably to assist in bringing in foodstuffs, the volunteer corps in the British concession today was ordered to stay ready for immediate mobilization. A truckload of vegetables was successfully escorted into the foreign zone under armed guard yesterday.

To protect any British merchantmen trying to reach Tientsin, the 1045-ton escort vessel Sandwich anchored off the bund, reinforcing the cruiser Lowestoft. British ships trying to reach Tientsin earlier in the blockade were stopped by Japanese and searched. British protests were ignored.

The situation on Kulangsu island, the international settlement at the South China port of Amoy, remained similar to that here, with food supplies exceedingly low in both cases.

MASS AIRPLANE PRODUCTION HIT

Republicans Would Curb Construction Of 3,032 Ships By 1941

WASHINGTON, June 21 — Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's recent testimony before the house appropriations committee was slated to be cited on the house floor today by Republicans seeking to curb President Roosevelt's program for the immediate acquisition of 3,032 planes for the army.

As the house prepared to consider a special $292,695,547 appropriation bill carrying funds sufficient to bring the air force strength to 5,500 planes by June 30, 1941, the G. O. P. members said they would fight to have funds set aside for research work which Lindbergh described as urgently needed.

Rep. Powers (R) New Jersey, said the Republicans would demand that the money be held to a sum only sufficient to bring the air force to 4,500 planes and that the remainder of the funds be earmarked for the establishment of experimental and research stations including the $4,000,000 one proposed for Sunnyvale, Calif.

Lindbergh told the appropriations committee that the United States lags behind Europe in the development of military aircraft and that a research program should be begun at once to enable this nation to catch up. Although endorsing Mr. Roosevelt's program, the colonel repeatedly emphasized that quality, not quantity, should be the American goal in military aviation.

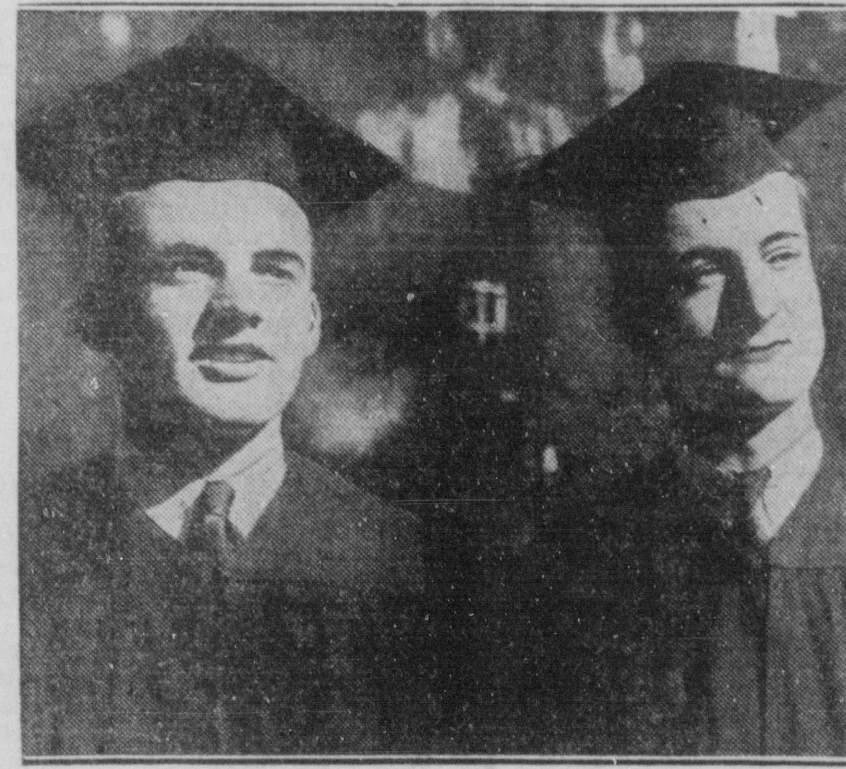

He declared that the United States should not attempt to match the numbers of Europe's air might at the present time, but should spend its defense money in developing the finest planes obtainable.

Coastal Ships Haul Food Two British coastal vessels, confident that guns of His Majesty's warships will protect them, sailed from Shanghai today to try to run the Japanese blockade at Tientsin with large cargoes of wheat, flour, vegetables and fruit.

Map-Makers Claim Byrd And Ellsworth Quadrant Uncle Sam's

GREAT BRITAIN ACTIVE

Great Mineral Deposits May Be Found In Land; Air Base Facilities Seen

CHICAGO, June 21 — A bitter battle against the British Empire is being waged by a little group of Chicagoans.

They seek to wrest from British a territory 1,000,000 square miles in area—an area one-third as large as the United States.

These men have no thought of personal gain.

They are scientists and craftsmen, armed only with ink and pens and other tools of cartography.

One-fifth of the Antarctic continent, they insist, is the property of the United States.

These men are employees of the map publishing house, Rand-McNally Company, which claims that the United States owns the Byrd-Ellsworth Quadrant of the Antarctic Continent. The Quadrant includes 1,000,000 of the 5,000,000 square miles in Antarctica. It is triangular in shape, reaching along two longitudes from the South to the Antarctic Ocean.

Boundaries of Area

Specifically, the area is a sector, bounded by Longitude 80 W., and Longitude 160 W., with the 70th latitudinal parallel as a base and the South Pole as the apex.

This territory was claimed by Admiral Richard E. Byrd and by Lincoln Ellsworth, but the claims were little more than formal gestures as the United States Government has never taken formal notice of them and there has been no action to establish under international law American rights to the territory.

Great Britain has not been so negligent. The governments of England, Australia and New Zealand have formally recognized ownership of more than 3,000,000 square miles of the ice-bound continent, and British maps show these claims. And they do not show any record of ownership for the territory claimed for the United States by the Rand-McNally map-makers.

However, the story is not new. The map-makers have always been ahead of government action. The map-makers discover a bit of unclaimed land, mark it for their own country and later, when the value of the area is discovered, the government acts.

And the value of the Antarctica territory may be immense. It is known that great mineral deposits, including coal, lie beneath the barren wastes of ice and snow. And there is a possibility the land may be rich in petroleum deposits.

Also, there is the possibility, and a very distinct one, that aviation bases may one day be established in Antarctica. One Rand-McNally executive said:

"Aviation has changed ideas about the values of these out-of-the-way places. For instance, the Russians have proved that sub-antarctic arctic flying is perfectly feasible.

"All right. Now just take an example. Following the great circle route, the customary course, an airplane flying from Sydney, Australia, to Buenos Aires would have to make a nonstop flight over water for more than 6,000 miles.

Facilities for Air Base

"But, two air bases could be set up in Antarctica. A plane using these, and flying over the pole from Sydney would have a maximum of 1,500 miles in the longest water-flight. The rest of it could be made over land.

"And if we don't own this land, we have to get permission to establish air bases."

So the cartographers wage their war for the tremendous territory. And for air bases, and coal and petroleum.

Included in the sector are such well known names as Rockefeller Plateau, Roosevelt Island, and Ruppert Coast.

ing toward relief handled through the county department. The minimum to be paid by the city under the new regulation would be 50 percent. The other half would be paid by the state. If the city decides to have the county department continue to handle the work it will be necessary for the city to pay its share of 50 percent, including administration costs.

City clients would continue to receive surplus commodities, regardless of how the relief problem is handled.

Mr. Marcy said he also expected to inform the city dads that Circleville will have to sponsor more W. P. A. projects to care for relief cases. At present the city is striving to obtain a project for alley work. The majority of the W. P. A. projects has been sponsored by the county in the last two years.

The house bill also includes setting up of a central file in the county relief office of all public assistance to prevent duplications in any of the various forms of aid.

Figures Compiled

Figures were being compiled Wednesday by Mr. Marcy on the approximate cost of handling city cases.

Means for the city to raise funds for meeting the relief costs are provided by other house bills. Mr. Marcy will inform council that contracts to comply with the methods of raising funds and relief administration must be worked out by the city solicitor and prosecuting attorney, legal advisers for the city and county.

keeping all fresh supplies and fuel from being carried from the mainland to Kulsang. Charging that Kulsang, like the foreign zones at Tientsin, was being used as a base for anti-Japanese operations, the Japanese demanded greater representation on the municipal council.

Just back from Tokyo, where he presumably received instructions from the foreign office, Goro Uchida, Japanese consul general at Amoy, said that a "dangerous situation" would arise unless Japan's demands were met. American, British, and French authorities on Kulsang have formed an international food committee which is attempting to secure supplies from foreign ships. So far no one has been injured by the powerful electric charge which the Japanese put into the wire surrounding the British and French concessions in Tientsin.

WOMEN TRAIN FOR WARFARE

LONDON, June 21 — "Ghost patrols" are populating Britain's highways.

Every evening after nightfall there may be seen on Britain's roads convoys of trucks and ambulances driven by heavily garbed figures whose faces are hidden by gas masks.

The "ghost patrols" are composed of women being trained to drive under warlike conditions in order that in time of emergency men may be relieved for more important duties.

This was revealed in London recently by the Dowager Lady Reading, chief of the Women's Voluntary Services.

"On moonless nights," she said, "we loose the drivers thirty at a time, and make them drive about in convoy form, without lights, and wearing gas masks.

Drive in Darkness
"They drive for about three mile and then, at a signal they stop and reverse for about a quarter of a mile, still in convoy form and in complete darkness."

An official of the organization stated that hundreds of women who enrolled in the Women's Voluntary Services have been undergoing this training.

"The exercises depend largely on the imagination of the organizer," the official added.

"The women operate as a volunteer transport unit working under emergency conditions. A headquarters is set up and dispatch riders bring details of imaginary bomb explosions.

"Women drive off in their cars to supposed bomb explosions. "They drive off without lights

Girls Hit Co-Education And are Job-Minded

NEW YORK, June 21 — The Modern Miss doesn't think so highly of co-education.

From questionnaires answered during the past three months by more than 2,700 high school seniors, Paul H. Hornbeck, director of the National Bureau of Private Schools, discovered that the average girl high school senior is opposed to co-education.

However, the majority of girls who indicated that they did not agree with the theory of co-education displayed interest in social activities. They just felt that education and social activity should not be mixed at school.

Eighty-nine percent of the girls. Mr. Hornbeck revealed had definite careers or vocations in mind. Only 46% of the boys interviewed indicated that they had made a choice of careers. Approximately the same number of boys and girls were interviewed.

The youths came in to the National Bureau of Private Schools for educational guidance. Through their unanimity of opinion Mr. Hornbeck believed that it is possible to gauge their changing conceptions and needs. An interesting deduction, he stated, can be drawn from the fact the average amount of money these students have to spend for education during the coming school year is $50 higher than in the past two. This year's average figure is $815.

The average age of the boys interviewed was 17 years and three months, of the girls it was 16 years and 10 months. The boys expected to command a salary of $25 weekly the first year after graduation from college. The girls will be content with $20 weekly, the report showed.

In choice of careers the girls were more practical, Mr. Hornbeck contended. They chose home economics, dietetics, nursing, teaching, stenography and typing, and journalism. The boys lean toward the professions: law, dentistry, and medicine.

The questionnaires showed that both the boys and girls display a greater knowledge of social and political problems than heretofore. They were almost unanimous in their approval of Federal Housing, Federal subsidization of the Arts and the Federal Farm Policy. They believe the government should not interfere with business, however.

Thirty percent of the boys interviewed indicated that they hoped to partially support themselves while in college through part-time employment. Only seven percent of the girls hoped to find student employment.

DADDY'S FORECAST ABOUT BABY'S SEX GOES AWRY

NEWARK, N. J., June 1—Although nature double-crossed him all along the line, Sidney A. Fortel, 35, refused today to admit any infallibility in the secret system by which he claims he has accurately foretold the sex of 150 babies.

Fortel turned out to be 100 percent wrong in his predictions that his wife would present him with a baby boy on June 17 or 18 when she gave birth to a baby girl yesterday afternoon. Fortel had some time ago mailed advance announcements of the birth of a son, "Howard."

"The little girl will have a welcome but I won't take this sitting down," declared Fortel. "People will laugh at me but don't forget they laughed at Pasteur."

SURPRISE DRIVE BY NIPPONESE CLAIMS SWATOW

Attack Made As American Destroyer Stands By To Aid Nationals

ceived by the London Evening Star reported that several fires had broken out in Swatow after Japanese warships and planes had bombarded Chinese positions. Foreigners in the city were reported safe. The United States destroyer John D. Pope which left Heng Kong for Amoy yesterday is expected to be diverted to Swatow, the dispatch said.

Transports filled with more troops then sailed up the river as warships occupied the Swatow harbor.

In a pincers movement, meanwhile, two other Japanese columns pushed inland on both sides of the city, aiming to encircle Swatow and cut the railroad leading to Chaochow — said to be one of the main sources of war supplies for the Chinese.

The Pillsbury stood by to protect the handful of Americans in Swatow.

With British merchantmen reported "discouraged" from entering Swatow harbor, the British destroyer Thanet also lay in readiness to protect its nationals.

Japanese army and navy forces landed at three points near Swatow while naval vessels steamed into the harbor. The landing contingents then struck inland to make a circuitous drive against the city of 178,000.

Outside the harbor of Swatow, it was reliably reported here, Japanese warships were stopping British ships and advising them not to enter.

Before entering Swatow harbor, Japanese naval units captured several islets lying outside and removed a number of mines.

Yet that is exactly what a stranger did the other day, and the boys are still gasping at his nonchalance.

Tall, white-haired and well dressed, the intruder first was noticed calmly sitting at the Democratic leaders' table in the middle of the chamber. Members asked one another who he was. None knew. Former Congressmen have the privilege of the floor throughout their lives, and it was assumed he was an old-timer.

Finally the doorkeepers decided there was something strange about the man and they summoned Speaker Bankhead.

"Never saw him before," he said, after scrutinizing the stranger. Neither had Sergeant-at-Arms Kenneth Romney. So Doorkeeper Fred Schatzman was directed to do the bouncing. He walked up to the intruder and quietly inquired what he was doing in the chamber.

The gate-crasher ignored the question. Instead, to Schatzman's astonishment, he shoved out his hand and said amiably, "Plunkett's my name, Plunkett from Iowa. What's yours?"

When Schatzman regained his breath he explained that visitors were not allowed on the floor. "Those galleries up there," he said, "are for that purpose."

"Oh, I was up in the gallery," replied the gate-crasher blithely, "but I couldn't hear very well. As there were a lot of empty seats down here I decided to come down so I could make out what was going on."

RABID FOX KILLED

CHILLICOTHE, June 21 — Dr. R. E. Bower, Ross county health commissioner, received word Tuesday that a fox killed recently near Halleville had rabies. It is possible, the doctor believes, the fox had been bitten by the same dog that infected cattle on the Floyd Rittenour farm, about a mile from the site of the shooting. A cow on the farm died a week ago.

Egyptians 4,000 years ago played a game resembling baseball. The two Philadelphia clubs still do.

guarded against intruders than the House of Representatives when in session. Four doorkeepers stand guard at each entrance and it's about as easy to get by them as to break out of Alcatraz.

Yet that is exactly what a stranger did the other day, and the boys are still gasping at his nonchalance.

Tall, white-haired and well dressed, the intruder first was noticed calmly sitting at the Democratic leaders' table in the middle of the chamber. Members asked one another who he was. None knew. Former Congressmen have the privilege of the floor throughout their lives, and it was assumed he was an old-timer.

Finally the doorkeepers decided there was something strange about the man and they summoned Speaker Bankhead.

"Never saw him before," he said, after scrutinizing the stranger. Neither had Sergeant-at-Arms Kenneth Romney. So Doorkeeper Fred Schatzman was directed to do the bouncer. He walked up to the intruder and quietly inquired what he was doing in the chamber.

The gate-crasher ignored the question. Instead, to Schatzman's astonishment, he shoved out his hand and said amiably, "Plunkett's my name, Plunkett from Iowa. What's yours?"

When Schatzman regained his breath he explained that visitors were not allowed on the floor. "Those galleries up there," he said, "are for that purpose."

"Oh, I was up in the gallery," replied the gate-crasher blithely, "but I couldn't hear very well. As there were a lot of empty seats down here I decided to come down so I could make out what was going on."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

What the Russians think of the Nazis soon will be illustrated by a new film "Frederick's Defeat," depicting the Russian capture of Berlin in 1760. The picture reminds the world that Russia has been successful in carrying warfare to enemy soil. Frederick, incidentally, is one of the great idols of Hitler. . . . Tom Corcoran has secured a new attorney for Dave Dubinsky and the International Ladies Garment Workers, following the death of Frank Walsh. He is Dean Acheson, who will try the first test of the Norris-LaGuardia Act which bars injunctions against labor unions without a hearing. The test is in the Nell Donnelly case, Mrs. Donnelly being the wife of ex-Senator Jim Reed of Kansas City.

SUPREME COURT SCORE

High score in decisions handed down by the Supreme Court in its recently concluded term was chalked up by Justices Stone and Roberts, who tied for first with 21 major rulings each.

Second place went to Chief Justice Hughes with 17 decrees followed by Justices Black and Reed with 16 each, Justices Butler and McReynolds with 15, Justice Frankfurter with ten in the four months he sat on the bench, Justice Brandeis six before his retirement in February, and Justice Douglas two in the six weeks he served.

JUSTICES BUTLER, STONE, BLACK AND REED HAD PERFECT ATTENDANCE RECORDS FOR THE EIGHT-MONTHS TERM, NOT MISSING A SITTING OF THE COURT. POOREST ATTENDANCE RECORD WAS CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES' OWING TO HIS ILLNESS.

No. 1 hooky player of the term was Justice McReynolds, who absented himself eight times, six on decision days, although not ill at Winter. He also was the only Justice who failed to show up at the commemorative services held by the Court in honor of the late Justice Cardozo.

McReynolds chalked up another record for the term. He wrote the largest number dissents—26. His fellow Old-Guarder, Justice Butler, was close behind with 25. Of the 90 dissenting opinions issued during the term, the two veteran die-hards teamed up 24 times. Justice Brandeis, famed for his dissents, ended his career without a single one.

GOODMAN WINS POLL

Benny Goodman, America's original King of Swing, retained his royal title this week when he finished first in the Swing-Hot Band Division in the annual orchestra poll conducted by a magazine.

Bob Crosby, sensational young swing maestro who recently signed a radio contract, finished fourth in the Swing Band Division of the poll, giving Artie Shaw and Tommy Dorsey a close run for second and third places respectively. Crosby finished sixth in the general all around popularity poll. Crosby's honors are especially notable since they reflect the way this Dixieland Swing stylist has skyrocketed to the top in the past few months.

CALM IN DANZIG

WHILE Europe holds its breath for the expected Danzig explosion, an American newspaper man finds that city quiet and apparently contented. There is no such tension as there was in the Sudetenland before the Nazi invasion.

Danzig, although in Polish territory and legally subject to the Polish government, is already Nazified. There are Brown Shirts and Black Shirts and Swastikas everywhere. The German language is spoken by everybody. Street signs are all German. The Polish minority there have accepted the situation and the government doesn't interfere. Citizens have full freedom to live, speak and act as Germans. They can wear any uniform and join any organization they please, and drill and sing and shout as much as they like. They have their own local laws and courts. Poland only handles foreign relations, operates the railroads and collects the customs.

That may look to a neutral outsider like a very tolerable situation. Millions now governed by Hitler, if they were under such a mild rule, would find their lot far easier than it is now.

But observers mostly agree that it is only a question of time, and perhaps a very short time, until provocative agents provide a pretext and the Nazi drums start beating and Hitler marches in on his self-appointed mission of race-redemption.

Then what will happen to the Danzig Poles? And what will Poland do? And will another Armageddon begin?

COLLEGE IN TEN YEARS

ONE of the graduates at Northwestern University this month was a young woman who rates special attention. She has been going to college for ten years and has just completed the full course and received her degree.

It didn't take ten years because she was dull. Miss Elizabeth Wehner has been working all this time. She is a bookkeeping machine operator. Her college work was taken at night school. Three nights a week she attended classes. She saved one night for pleasure and relaxation. She doubtless studied in her remaining evenings. Her scholastic average for all her work was high.

Miss Wehner seems to have got the habit now. She says she intends to start at once working for a master's degree. In the meantime, it may be supposed, she'll be getting a different job and better pay. These ought to be some of the rewards for her perseverance and effort. No doubt the greatest reward is her own satisfaction at accomplishing the thing she set out to do.

World At A Glance

STATE SECRETARY CORDELL HULL and Agriculture Secretary Henry A. Wallace are getting rapidly into what looks like a regular row over Uncle Sam's international trade policy.

It's quite natural for them to disagree. Secretary Hull, as an old-time Democrat, always has opposed artificial restrictions upon or stimulations of imports and exports. Secretary Wallace, who was a perfectly good Republican until he accepted a New Deal cabinet post, evidently still is a believer in the time-honored G.O.P. protective doctrine.

HIGH IMPORT TARIFFS

It's easy to see why American manufacturers liked high import tariffs. Maybe they were shortsighted in doing so, but they didn't think they were. The protective system tended to keep foreign manufacturers from breaking into the Yankee market in competition with our domestic folk, which enabled the latter to maintain stiff domestic prices. If they over-produced a trifle they sold their surplus abroad for less than they charged here. But they didn't over-produce much, because a factory can limit its output very readily.

But agriculture is different. American farmers not only CAN over-produce in proportion to the

HULL FAVORS BACKING BRITISH

WASHINGTON — The private talks which British Ambassador Lindsay has had with Secretary Hull can be summed up in one sentence: The British desperately need and want U. S. cooperation in the Far East to help stand off Japan.

Hull has been very secretive but his personal reaction, although he probably would deny it, has been favorable to the British. However, the reaction of the U. S. Navy, especially the dynamic admiral who is its real boss, is emphatically negative.

One year and a half ago, when the Japanese deliberately bombed and sank the U. S. gunboat Panay, Admiral Leahy was in favor of cooperating with the British. He pointed out that American rights had been deliberately flouted and that the American public would support a blockade against Japan.

Secretary Hull hung back. His career advisers, particularly Hugh R. Wilson, were opposed. Wilson paced the floor of Hull's office, frenziedly urging that no action be taken.

Now, however, the position is reversed. Admiral Leahy points out that Americans are not being molested, that no American rights are at stake, and that the United States immediately would be accused of pulling British chestnuts out of the fire.

So he proposes keeping the U. S. fleet out of Japanese waters.

BRITISH DOUBLE-CROSS

Significant fact to remember about the Far East is that the British now are reaping what they sowed.

Back in 1931, when Japan first invaded Manchuria, Secretary of State Stimson did his best to rally world support and the peace machinery of the League of Nations against Japan. He got the cooperation of France and various smaller nations, but from the British nothing but empty promises.

In fact, when it was agreed with the British to deliver identic notes of protest to Japan against aggression, the British Ambassador would come back to the Japanese Foreign Office shortly after delivering his protest, and say in effect that Britain merely was going through a routine protest in deference to the United States, and that she thoroughly understood Japan's problems.

Even during naval conferences, the British frequently played with the Japanese, and the American delegation at one conference was cautious about giving out confidential information in front of R. E. Craggie, for fear it might leak to Japan.

Craggie is now British Ambassador to Japan and has the unpleasant task of protesting to the government which he once so ardently favored.

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

YESTERDAY we described the symptoms which were given us in a letter from a reader. These symptoms—overweight, sleepfulness, and dry skin and hair—indicated a condition of lack of secretion of the thyroid gland, known as myxoedema. We described what help the patient could obtain from a doctor who would perform a simple test which measures the oxygen consumption of the body (basal metabolism). This test, we pointed out, indicates in quite a quantitative manner exactly how bad the thyroid deficiency is, allowing the doctor to replace the deficiency with thyroid extract quite accurately.

Myxoedema is quite a severe form of thyroid deficiency, and it might be well to follow up this account with some remarks on less complete loss of this important secretion.

Necessary for Health

The thyroid secretion is certainly necessary for complete health. It must be maintained at a fairly constant level of production, if the human organism is to remain in a state of well-being. Many physiological organisms are able to keep up such a maintenance. Others, for reasons, some of which are known and others unknown, show a considerable fluctuation of thyroid secretion. Such individuals will have alternating periods of well-being and of a state of health which can hardly be described as sickness, but consisting of a state of fatigue and subnormality.

The modern physician is able to recognize these conditions and to treat them by the means mentioned above, as I have said, with great accuracy.

Frequent Symptom

Perhaps the most frequent symptom of these states of incipient hypothyroidism is somnolence—undue sleepiness—or, in lieu of that, forgetfulness, lack of concentration, day dreaming, a tendency to procrastinate. Of course, we all have these symptoms, it is true, but it is also true that probably they are due to temporary lapses in the vigor of the thyroid. That they occur in those of middle age is simply a confirmation of this, because lowered thyroid activity is particularly liable to occur at this time.

The nose and throat also show some symptoms. There is a feeling of stuffiness due to swelling of the nose and of the bronchial tubes. Allergy, another cause for boggy membranes, is always worse when associated with hypothyroidism, according to Dr. C. L. Hartsock.

Tongue Swelling

Swelling of the tongue and hoarseness are typical symptoms of myxoedema, and can be observed in milder forms.

Naturally, a tendency to overweight may be present. Dryness of the skin and hair, brittle and thick, coarse nails, falling hair and premature graying are very suggestive.

This, I realize, is a somewhat suggestive list—it is liable to make the reader think he has all the symptoms I am listing. So the best thing to do is to consult your doctor—we are advised to do that anyway once a year when we are in the hypothyroid age. And under the heading of treatment, do not try to do your own doctoring on any account. The administration of thyroid by the patient himself, without any professional advice, is one of the most dangerous of indoor sports.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

AT THE SIGHT of the broad, fat panama on his head, the lean, lithe writer at the wheel of the low-slung car lifted quizzical eyebrows. "Hello, Punk," he said, with amused detachment. "I'm in town writing. What's your reason?"

"Changing trains and a little time to kill."
"Punk Edwards, a crazy guy and a good reporter. Just out of New York," the man motioned to the others. "Friends of mine. Will you join us for orange juice and ham and eggs?"

"Thanks, but I pull out in ten minutes. See you somewhere, sometime. So long."
"You look worried," Corinne told Lynn Rhodes as they sipped the ice cold fruit juices which were served in silver bowls of ice. "No like the writing guy?"

"He's up to something. I've got a scoop in mind and I dare say he has, too. So we're friends, the best of friends, and we're after each other's scalps." He raised his fruit juice glass high. "Here's to luck—and love."

Lynn Rhode slipped into the parsonage routine readily. He paid his rent in advance, the whole two months on which he contemplated remaining in town. That rent was three times as much as the room was worth, too. He brought flowers, bonbons, books and magazines to the house. He was attentive to Mrs. Melton, to Miss Sarah and Miss Anne who lingered at the inn and tried to promote a romance which never reached more than a bantering friendship.

The man was impersonal in his attentions to the two girls that first week. Even the second week. But the third week Sarah Anne noticed that he was turning more and more to Corinne. She did not mind. She did not want him.

Nor did she want Jack any more. Being honest, she corrected that thought. She wanted Jack, but not with the knowledge that he gave first thought to another girl. Meantime Bob Kennedy's leg was getting better rapidly.

"Good living," he told Sarah Anne. "And the constitution I was given twenty odd years ago. I'll be out in a chair next week. Pretty soon I'll be going away."
Sarah Anne nodded. Going away? She had forgotten, for the moment, that presently she would pass the hospital and have no excuse for going up the wide steps. After all, Bob Kennedy was a man who loved another girl, and she must be glad that he was growing better so he could go to find her. But there was a curious void in her mind. She talked around it.

"Then you'll find Bernice and make matters right. If I can help—"

"No, I won't find Bernice! I'm not very sure I want to search. Anyway, she's in Europe now. I have a job to do with her some time later, so I'll have to see her, but she will be just a business acquaintance."

"A job?" To Sarah Anne's surprise her heart had skipped a beat because Bernice was gone. Now she asked curiously, "You work together? But she's a debutante!"

"She's also a crackerjack parachute jumper, Sarah Anne. One of the most daring, intrepid, amazing jumpers in the profession. Took it up when she was a kid, 14 or 15. And she's learned the way down all right. Handles the shroud ropes like a veteran, which she is." His voice was filled with honest admiration.

Bernice, who had bravery; Bernice, who pioneered among the clouds. Such girls men loved today. And she, who longed more than any of them, to go somewhere near high stars, must walk the earth paths.

"But Bernice's parents don't approve, do they?" she asked. "She has no parents. No relatives. Just a bank, and the guardians have stopped worrying. I met her when she was hitch-hitching. I guess you could call it. She was trying to get from Miami to New York by plane on a dare. I picked her up, and didn't know until later she was THE Bernice Cooper. She's spoiled, that's why she blew up around here the other day."

"But you love her," Sarah Anne said slowly.

"I was amazed and infatuated. She's a blaze, prairie fire, lightning." His voice grew lower, slower. "But she isn't warmth or comfort. I always knew that, but it didn't seem to matter until lately. She ran out on me. Understand? And it was my own fault. No one's ever taught her to stand by."

"What is the job you must do?" Sarah Anne asked. She knew so little about Bob Kennedy, she reflected. Just that he was undeniably attractive with that rough, bright hair, firm chin, candid, laughing eyes and the lean, long body that showed under the white coverlet.

"I fly for the fun of it. I'm investigating the stratosphere at the moment. Sarah Anne, do you know that no one can go up more than 35,000 feet—that's seven miles—and live?"

She shook her head. Bob was forgetting her. She was just an audience. He was off in his well-loved sky again.

"It's true. In case of war, we have to know if men could fight up there, and if jumps could be made, so Bernice has volunteered to go to find out, in my ship. I've been chosen to take up a plane."

"Then Bernice loves you or she wouldn't risk her life for you," Sarah Anne said.

"You think so?" His eyes were eager. Then he shook his head. "Anyway, I'm not letting her. Never have agreed. But I've got to see her, for business purposes, to talk her out of it."

"Tell me more," the minister's daughter begged. An idea was forming. Maybe she could jump. It would be simple. Just tumble from a plane. And then, when she was famous for her courage, maybe life would cease to be so humdrum. It was mad, of course. Still—

Bob spoke enthusiastically. The girl sensed that he had been lonely to talk of his profession, and no one had questioned him. But Jack? Where was he? Busy with the new plans, probably. Or with Judy. Yes, probably with Judy.

"The jump has to be made in a suit equipped with oxygen tanks which will be strapped to the jumper's legs and sides. This equipment has to be tested in the high altitude chamber of the army, and every precaution must be taken. The jumper has to have an automatic parachute so it will open in case he—it has to be a he—is unconscious from the altitude. Then he'll drift downward for half an hour."

"Is that all?"
"All?" He smiled at her indulgently, as one would smile at a sweet and pretty child who didn't understand, and she flushed. Then his eyes suddenly begged her pardon as he went on: "Listen, my sweet, there are 42 shroud cords to be handled with dexterous skill or you'll bump your head or break your leg . . ."

"I thought parachute jumping meant bailing out, pulling a rip cord and alighting," she interrupted, amazed.

"That's what most people believe, but it's really a science. When you and a cow pasture meet up, it's nice to know how to greet the cow pasture. But there's a lot to this venture, and Bernice isn't going out of my plane as a guinea pig." His voice became more serious. The jumper must be acutely conscious of every sensation—must remember how he felt physically and mentally all the way out and down, and try to give an account of his muscular co-ordination—"

Sarah Anne raised her brown eyes imploringly. "That's enough. I was having a moment of vicarious bravery but it's ended. I rather think that Bernice has more nice things about her than I thought, if she'll do all that."

He looked pleased. "Then you aren't going critical over my taste?"

"No, only worried over my blunder that took the girl out of your ship."

"Forget it." He moved and his pillow started to slip. Sarah Anne grabbed it just as he did. For a moment their eyes met and their faces were near. Sarah Anne was aware of a sudden bewilderment in the man's eyes that afterward she did not know how it had happened. Bob's long, hard arms drew down and his lips were firm, commanding, against hers. Just for a second, a second so brief it almost never happened.

So challenging was that impulsive kiss that it rent the girl's consciousness like a ray of clean, bright lightning. For it wasn't Bob's lips she felt. It was Jack's. And in that moment she realized he never had kissed her like this—never, never! He never had cared—very much.

And it was not strange to her in that moment that it was Jack's voice that spoke at the doorway as she and Bob drew apart.

AN EXCEPTIONALLY eventful and fortunate day is presaged by the interesting mutual and lunar aspects. A sudden and devastating occurrence may be a factor in putting the affairs on a substantial basis. There is promise of stability of fortune if the upheaval be met with sagacity and shrewdness. Tact and diplomacy will be the winning measures for success. Those whose birthday it is may find themselves suddenly involved in a whirlwind of events which may be responsible for definite stabilization of the affairs and fortunes after the initial devastation and upheaval have subsided. ### CALM IN DANZIG

WHILE Europe holds its breath for the expected Danzig explosion, an American newspaper man finds that city quiet and apparently contented. There is no such tension as there was in the Sudetenland before the Nazi invasion.

Danzig, although in Polish territory and legally subject to the Polish government, is already Nazified. There are Brown Shirts and Black Shirts and Swastikas everywhere. The German language is spoken by everybody. Street signs are all German. The Polish minority there have accepted the situation and the government doesn't interfere. Citizens have full freedom to live, speak and act as Germans. They can wear any uniform and join any organization they please, and drill and sing and shout as much as they like. They have their own local laws and courts. Poland only handles foreign relations, operates the railroads and collects the customs.

That may look to a neutral outsider like a very tolerable situation. Millions now governed by Hitler, if they were under such a mild rule, would find their lot far easier than it is now.

But observers mostly agree that it is only a question of time, and perhaps a very short time, until provocative agents provide a pretext and the Nazi drums start beating and Hitler marches in on his self-appointed mission of race-redemption.

Then what will happen to the Danzig Poles? And what will Poland do? And will another Armageddon begin?

COLLEGE IN TEN YEARS

ONE of the graduates at Northwestern University this month was a young woman who rates special attention. She has been going to college for ten years and has just completed the full course and received her degree.

It didn't take ten years because she was dull. Miss Elizabeth Wehner has been working all this time. She is a bookkeeping machine operator. Her college work was taken at night school. Three nights a week she attended classes. She saved one night for pleasure and relaxation. She doubtless studied in her remaining evenings. Her scholastic average for all her work was high.

Miss Wehner seems to have got the habit now. She says she intends to start at once working for a master's degree. In the meantime, it may be supposed, she'll be getting a different job and better pay. These ought to be some of the rewards for her perseverance and effort. No doubt the greatest reward is her own satisfaction at accomplishing the thing she set out to do.

World At A Glance

STATE SECRETARY COR-

DELL HULL and Agriculture Secretary Henry A. Wallace are getting rapidly into what looks like a regular row over Uncle Sam's international trade policy.

It's quite natural for them to disagree. Secretary Hull, as an old-time Democrat, always has opposed artificial restrictions upon or stimulations of imports and exports. Secretary Wallace, who was a perfectly good Republican until he accepted a New Deal cabinet post, evidently still is a believer in the time-honored G.O.P. protective doctrine.

HIGH IMPORT TARIFFS

It's easy to see why American manufacturers liked high import tariffs. Maybe they were shortsighted in doing so, but they didn't think they were. The protective system tended to keep foreign manufacturers from breaking into the Yankee market in competition with our domestic folk, which enabled the latter to maintain stiff domestic prices. If they over-produced a trifle they sold their surplus abroad for what they could get—often for less than they charged here. But they didn't over-produce much, because a factory can limit its output very readily.

But agriculture is different. American farmers not only CAN over-produce in proportion to the home demand for their crops. They generally DO. Occasionally they have a bad year, with high prices but not much to sell. And when a farmer does have a favorable climatic year he can't prevent his stuff from growing—he doesn't want to, for that matter. Consequently he usually has lots of crops, but a skimpy domestic demand for them. Hence he needs a foreign outlet. Else his surplus depresses his domestic prices. Meantime, protected manufacturers have soaked him with fancy figures upon everything he's had to purchase. The poor ruralite has been squeezed going and coming.

"PROTECTION" HURTS FARMERS

In justice to the manufacturers, it must be admitted that they invariably have been super-willing to grant agriculture any amount of tariff protection.

BUT—Tariff protection, while extremely nice for an interest which seeks to exclude imports, is extremely damaging to an interest which seeks exports.

This notion finally soaked into the agricultural bean. It became obvious to the farmer that what he required was a protective tariff in REVERSE—of some sort. In other words, he needed to be subsidized domestically, to enable him to undersell all competitors in for-

HULL FAVORS BACKING BRITISH

WASHINGTON — The private talks which British Ambassador Lindsay has had with Secretary Hull can be summed up in one sentence: The British desperately need and want U. S. cooperation in the Far East to help stand off Japan.

Hull has been very secretive but his personal reaction, although he probably would deny it, has been favorable to the British. However, the reaction of the U. S. Navy, especially the dynamic admiral who is its real boss, is emphatically negative.

One year and a half ago, when the Japanese deliberately bombed and sank the U. S. gunboat Panay, Admiral Leahy was in favor of cooperating with the British. He pointed out that American rights had been deliberately flouted and that the American public would support a blockade against Japan.

Secretary Hull hung back. His career advisers, particularly Hugh R. Wilson, were opposed. Wilson paced the floor of Hull's office, frenziedly urging that no action be taken.

Now, however, the position is reversed. Admiral Leahy points out that Americans are not being molested, that no American rights are at stake, and that the United States immediately would be accused of pulling British chestnuts out of the fire.

So he proposes keeping the U. S. fleet out of Japanese waters.

BRITISH DOUBLE-CROSS

Significant fact to remember about the Far East is that the British now are reaping what they sowed.

Back in 1931, when Japan first invaded Manchuria, Secretary of State Stimson did his best to rally world support and the peace machinery of the League of Nations against Japan. He got the cooperation of France and various smaller nations, but from the British nothing but empty promises.

In fact, when it was agreed with the British to deliver identic notes of protest to Japan against aggression, the British Ambassador would come back to the Japanese Foreign Office shortly after delivering his protest, and say in effect that Britain merely was going through a routine protest in deference to the United States, and that she thoroughly understood Japan's problems.

Even during naval conferences, the British frequently played with the Japanese, and the American delegation at one conference was cautious about giving out confidential information in front of R. E. Craggie, for fear it might leak to Japan.

Craggie is now British Ambassador to Japan and has the unpleasant task of protesting to the government which he once so ardently favored.

That rent was three times as much as the room was worth, too. He brought flowers, bonbons, books and magazines to the house. He was attentive to Mrs. Melton, to Miss Sarah and Miss Anne who lingered at the inn and tried to promote a romance which never reached more than a bantering friendship.

The man was impersonal in his attentions to the two girls that first week. Even the second week. But the third week Sarah Anne noticed that he was turning more and more to Corinne. She did not mind. She did not want him.

Nor did she want Jack any more. Being honest, she corrected that thought. She wanted Jack, but not with the knowledge that he gave first thought to another girl. Meantime Bob Kennedy's leg was getting better rapidly.

"Good living," he told Sarah Anne. "And the constitution I was given twenty odd years ago. I'll be out in a chair next week. Pretty soon I'll be going away."

Sarah Anne nodded. Going away? She had forgotten, for the moment, that presently she would pass the hospital and have no excuse for going up the wide steps. After all, Bob Kennedy was a man who loved another girl, and she must be glad that he was growing better so he could go to find her. But there was a curious void in her mind. She talked around it. "Then you'll find Bernice and make matters right. If I can help—"

"No, I won't find Bernice! I'm not very sure I want to search. Anyway, she's in Europe now. I have a job to do with her some time later, so I'll have to see her, but she will be just a business accomplice."

"A job?" To Sarah Anne's surprise her heart had skipped a beat because Bernice was gone. Now she asked curiously, "You work together? But she's a debutante!"

"She's also a crackerjack parachute jumper, Sarah Anne. One of the most daring, intrepid, amazing jumpers in the profession. Took it up when she was a kid, 14 or 15. And she's learned the way down all right. Handles the shroud ropes like a veteran, which she is. His voice was filled with honest admiration."

Bernice, who had bravery; Bernice, who pioneered among the clouds. Such girls men loved to day. And she, who longed more than any of them, to go somewhere near high stars, must walk the earth paths.

"But Bernice's parents don't approve, do they?" she asked.

"She has no parents. No relatives. Just a bank, and the guardians have stopped worrying. I met her when she was hitch-hitching. I guess you could call it. She was trying to get from Miami to New York by plane on a dare. I picked her up, and didn't know until later she was THE Bernice Cooper. She's spoiled, that's why she blew up around here the other day."

"But you love her," Sarah Anne said slowly.

"I was amazed and infatuated. She's a blaze, prize fire, lightning." His voice grew lower, slower. "But she isn't warmth or comfort. I always knew that, but it didn't seem to matter until lately. She ran out on me. Understand? And it was my own fault. No one's ever taught her to stand by."

"What is the job you must do?" Sarah Anne asked. She knew so little about Bob Kennedy, she reflected. Just that he was undeniably attractive with that rough, bright hair, firm chin, candid, laughing eyes and the lean, long body that showed under the white coverlet.

"I fly for the fun of it. I'm investigating the stratosphere at the moment. Sarah Anne, do you know that no one can go up more than 35,000 feet—that's seven miles—and live?"

She shook her head. Bob was forgetting her. She was just an audience. He was off in his well-loved sky again.

"It's true. In case of war, we have to know if jumps could be made, so Bernice has volunteered to go to find out, in my ship. I've been chosen to take up a plane."

"Then Bernice loves you or she wouldn't risk her life for you," Sarah Anne said.

"You think so?" His eyes were eager. Then he shook his head. "Any way, I'm not letting her. Never have agreed. But I've got to see her, for business purposes, to talk her out of it."

"Tell me more," the minister's daughter begged. An idea was forming. Maybe she could jump. It would be simple. Just tumble from a plane. And then, when she was famous for her courage, maybe life would cease to be so humdrum.

It was mad, of course. Still—

Bob spoke enthusiastically. The girl sensed that he had been lonely to talk of his profession, and no one had questioned him. But Jack? Where was he? Busy with the new plans, probably. Or with Judy. Yes, probably with Judy.

"The jump has to be made in a suit equipped with oxygen tanks which will be strapped to the jumper's legs and sides. This equipment has to be tested in the high altitude chamber of the army, and every precaution must be taken. The jumper has to have an automatic parachute so it will open in case he—it has to be a he—is unconscious from the altitude. Then he'll drift downward for half an hour."

"Is that all?"

"All?" He smiled at her indulgently, as one would smile at a sweet and pretty child who didn't understand, and she flushed. Then his eyes suddenly begged her pardon as he went on: "Listen, my sweet, there are 42 shroud cords to be handled with dexterous skill or you'll bump your head or break your leg."

"That's what most people believe, but it's really a science. When you and a cow pasture meet up, it's nice to know how to greet the cow pasture. But there's a lot to this venture, and Bernice isn't going out of my plane as a guinea pig."

"His voice became more serious. The jumper must be acutely conscious of every sensation—must remember how he felt physically and mentally all the way out and down, and try to give an account of his muscular co-ordination."

Sarah Anne raised her brown eyes imploringly. "That's enough. I was having a moment of vicarious bravery but it's ended. I rather think that Bernice has more nice things about her than I thought, if she'll do all that."

He looked pleased. "Then you aren't going critical over my taste?"

"No, only worried over my blunder that took the girl out of your ship."

"Forget it!" He moved and his pillow started to slip. Sarah Anne grabbed it just as he did. For a moment their eyes met and their faces were near. Sarah Anne was aware of a sudden bewilderment in the man's eyes that afterward she did not know how it had happened. Bob's long, hard arms drew down and his lips were firm, commanding, against hers. Just for a second, a second so brief it almost never happened.

So challenging was that impulsive kiss that it rent the girl's consciousness like a ray of clean, bright lightning. For it wasn't Bob's lips she felt. It was Jack's. And in that moment she realized he never had kissed her like this—never, never! He never had cared—very much.

And it was not strange to her in that moment that it was Jack's voice that spoke at the doorway as she and Bob drew apart.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, June 21

AN EXCEPTIONALLY eventful and fortunate day is presaged by the interesting mutual and lunar aspects. A sudden and devastating occurrence may be a factor in putting the affairs on a substantial basis. There is promise of stability of fortune if the upheaval be met with sagacity and shrewdness. Tact and diplomacy will be the winning measures for success. Employers and superiors are approachable, being impressed by industry, fidelity and the merit of propositions presented.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves suddenly involved in a whirlwind of events which may be responsible for definite stabilization of the affairs and fortunes after the initial devastation and upheaval have subsided. But it will take sound plans, hard work and dependability of character to secure the cooperation of elders and superiors, who are best approached by tact and finesse, rather than high pressure methods.

A child born on this day may be studious, profound, industrious and dependable, despite a rather dynamic or dramatic quality, giving it the power to wrest favor and fortune, place and popularity from untoward circumstances.

GARDEN-GRAPH

Exit Dandelions

When a dandelion rears its pesky head in a crevice between the flag stones of a terrace or garden walk it cannot be gotten rid of just by shearing off or pulling out the green top. The dandelion has deep roots and it will grow again almost as soon as you turn your back. It is not advisable to attempt digging a plant out by hand for this method leaves an ugly hole and too often it is impossible to get all the root. The section of the root remaining in the ground grows just that much more lustily for having been disturbed.

The modern method of destroying dandelions is by using a chemical. The illustration shows the use of an eye-dropper as a death weapon for dandelions. By means of the eye dropper squirt a few drops of carbolic acid (commercial) or sulphate of iron into the heart of the plant. As these chemicals are poisonous, great care must be used in handling them.

D. A. R. Installs New Officers At Meeting

50 Hear Interesting Address By State Chairman

Gathering at the Pickaway Country club for the closing meeting of the year, 50 members and guests enjoyed the noon luncheon, Tuesday, of the Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Miss Rosalie R. Haddox of Columbus, state chairman of the Children of the American Revolution, told interesting details of her work during the program hour which followed the three course luncheon served at a long table set on the spacious porch.

Vases of regal lilies, larkspur, baby breath, southern magnolias and roses were placed at intervals on the table which was gay in its patriotic party appointments.

Mrs. Bryce Briggs, regent, welcomed the guests as they were seated. Mrs. Charles Gerhardt, chaplain, offering a brief prayer before the luncheon was served. The ritualistic opening of the afternoon program was closed with the flag pledge. Mrs. C. C. Watts, secretary, read her reports and the auditing committee, Mrs. Will Mack and Mrs. B. R. Bales, reported its findings.

Miss Marie L. Hamilton, chairman of the program committee for the next year, announced that the September session would be in the home of Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, Williamsport, and that the program would concern Genealogy. There would be a playlet by four members and Mrs. Walter Barrett, a Chillicothe member, would present a paper, on "Ancestors," which would tell of the fun of looking them up.

Miss Haddox in her talk said that the program of the G. A. R. runs parallel to that of the D. A. R., members being received in the organization from birth to the age of 21 years. Children from the ages of four to 21 get the most out of the work. Adopted children are received as associate members.

The projects include increasing the membership, patriotic education, history, sponsoring old ships, correct use of the flag, mountain school project, conservation work and genealogical scrapbooks, hospital programs at Christmas time, memorizing the national anthems and the use of American composers on the programs. There is a state motion picture chairman, whose duties include the effort to arrange suitable films for children for the weekend performances.

There are now 600 organized societies in the United States, New York ranking first with 43, Ohio holding fifth place with 26, she said, and she also displayed year books planned and arranged by members of the chapters. In closing, Miss Haddox told of the requirements for organizing D.A.R. chapters and answered many questions in regard to her work.

Miss Hamilton read an interesting paper prepared by Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, flag chairman, on "The Flag and the Proper Way to Salute Flags". She mentioned in opening her subject that flags in the early times were a means of identification and symbols of achievement, representing faith, hope and high resolves. She said that the Indians who greeted the first settlers in America bore flags as symbols of their tribes. She told of the process of choosing and arranging the American flag, which is the result of long study and observation of our ancestors.

In closing she said that the flag should be treated as a living thing as it represents a living country. Rules for its proper use were then read.

Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker recommended for reading a new book by Thomas Dixon, "The Flaming Sword". Mr. Dixon will be remembered as the author of "The Clansmen" and "The Birth of a Nation".

Mrs. Briggs then spoke briefly of her two years as regent, formally presenting Mrs. C. C. Watts, incoming regent, with the regent's pin. Mrs. Watts and the other new officers, Mrs. Lee Shaner, first vice president, Mrs. James Moffitt, second vice president; Mrs. Will Mack, recording secretary; Miss Mary Heffner, corresponding sec-

More than 75 relatives and friends responded to invitations for the advancement ceremony and evening party of Girl Scout Troop, No. 4, Tuesday, in Memorial Hall auditorium. Baskets of colorful garden flowers of many varieties formed the attractive setting for the program presented by troop members assisted by Miss Ruth Stout, assistant leader of the group. Miss Mariel Sayre, troop captain, was unable to be present because of illness.

The girls, attractive in their uniforms of green, welcomed the guests with a song. Formal entry of the troop led by the color bearers and guards was followed by prayer and the flag ceremony. The girls then repeated the scout promise.

A question box of queries concerning scout rules and regulations was next on the program, each scout receiving and answering a question.

The regular activities of the scouts were presented, including singing of several pleasing songs, knot tying, dancing, when two groups gracefully danced the Virginia Reel, and games.

The impressive advancement ceremony closed the program. The girls advanced, carrying candles which were lighted during the service. After the three points of the girl scout promise were explained, Maxine Friedman and Jean Burns, patrol leaders, renewed their patrol pledges. Two candidates, Jo Anne Wallace and Reah Jean Mason, were accepted in the membership of the troop. Thirteen girls were then made second class scouts, including Ann Moeller, Jean Trimmer, Mary Ellen Fissell, Katherine Betz, Christine Schreiner, Carolyn Herrmann, Jean Burns, Patty Clifton, Mary Katherine Morgan, Hildah Rhoades, June Ellen Cook, Ann Curtin and Maxine Friedman.

Four scouts, June Ellen Cook, Ann Curtin, Maxine Friedman and Ann Moeller, were awarded stars for attending 90 percent of the meetings for the last year.

The ceremonies closed with the regulation scout routine. During the evening, Miss Stout was presented a gift from the girls by Mrs. Malcolm Parrett, who told that it was a recognition of faithful services in their behalf during the year. Mrs. Parrett played the piano music for the dancing and singing and advancement ceremony.

Refreshments were served by the girls assisted by Miss Stout, Mrs. Parrett and Mrs. Wellington Stout. The refreshment table was attractive in its party appointments, four lighted tapers marking the corners. Mrs. Parrett served the punch. Hand-made favors of mint centered daisies in miniature flower pots were given the ladies while the men received single flowers for their coats.

Today's Fashion

THE PEASANT dress silhouette is too becoming to too many figures to be neglected by the stylists. Little frocks of the type sketched are plentiful. GARDEN-GRAPH

Exit Dandelions
When a dandelion rears its pesky head in a crevice between the flag stones of a terrace or garden walk it cannot be gotten rid of just by shearing off or pulling out the green top. The dandelion has deep roots and it will grow again almost as soon as you turn your back. It is not advisable to attempt digging a plant out by hand for this method leaves an ugly hole and too often it is impossible to get all the root. The section of the root remaining in the ground grows just that much more lustily for having been disturbed.

The modern method of destroying dandelions is by using a chemical. The illustration shows the use of an eye-dropper as a death weapon for dandelions. By means of the eye dropper squirt a few drops of carbolic acid (commercial) or sulphate of iron into the heart of the plant. As these chemicals are poisonous, great care must be used in handling them.

Tleche of Shreve are spending a few days with friends in Circleville.

GOLF STAR GIVES UP IN ATTEMPT TO SCORE ACE

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 21—Harry Gonder, 25-year-old golf professional, gave up early today after failing in almost 17 hours of continuous effort to score a hole in one.

His hands blistered and sore, his back weary and his arms leaden, Gonder stopped firing after his 1,817th drive failed to settle in the cup on the 136-yard tenth hole of the Beverly Shores Country Club course.

Gonder began his marathon at 10 a. m. yesterday to win a $25 friendly wager from William Voltz, "duffer" golfer who scored an ace on the tenth hole some weeks ago. The young pro had tried to prove that "if a 100-shooter can make a hole in one, anybody can." Voltz differed with that notion and the wager was made.

At 2:40 a. m. Gonder admitted he was licked. Twice in the last few hours he had seen his ball bounce around the rim of the cup, only to stop rolling inches away. Scores of times he came within a few feet of his goal but not once could he land the ball in the cup.

GOLF STAR GIVES UP IN ATTEMPT TO SCORE ACE

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 21 — Harry Gonder, 25-year-old golf professional, gave up early today after failing in almost 17 hours of continuous effort to score a hole in one.

His hands blistered and sore, his back weary and his arms leaden, Gonder stopped firing after his 1,817th drive failed to settle in the cup on the 136-yard tenth hole of the Beverly Shores Country Club course.

Gonder began his marathon at 10 a. m. yesterday to win a $25 friendly wager from William Voltz, "duffer" golfer who scored an ace on the tenth hole some weeks ago. The young pro had tried to prove that "if a 100-shooter can make a hole in one, anybody can." Voltz differed with that notion and the wager was made.

At 2:40 a. m. Gonder admitted he was licked. Twice in the last few hours he had seen his ball bounce around the rim of the cup, only to stop rolling inches away. Scores of times he came within a few feet of his goal but not once could he land the ball in the cup.

Three Cincinnati Stars To Be Honored Sunday

CINCINNATI, June 21—Recognition for outstanding achievements will be paid to three members of the Reds' family preceding Sunday's game between Cincinnati and the New York Giants at Crosley Field, and the occasion will mark the first time in history that three men on a single ball club have been designated as recipients of the honors issued annually by the St. Louis Sporting News, national baseball weekly.

DICK METZ WINS ILLINOIS CROWN FROM REVOLTA

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., June 21 — Handsome Dick Metz of Chicago pocketed $250 and donned the Illinois professional golf crown today after his blazing 69 over the final 18 holes of the championship booted curly-haired Johnny Revolta out of the title he had sought for the fourth straight time.

Second to Metz was E. J. "Dutch" Harrison, another Chicagoan who duplicated the winner's 69 in the last round but had a first round score of 73 for a total of 142.

Revolta, who led the field at the halfway mark with a two-under-par 70, took 74 strokes yesterday for a 144 total and third place. The Evanston ace won $100 for his effort, while Harrison's second place was worth $150.

Other money winners were Ky Laffoon, Bob McDonald, George Smith, Jim Foulis, Eddie Williams, John Gibson and Charley Penna, all of Chicago.

STEEL WORKER, PRO'S SON TOP AMATEUR STAR

DAYTON, June 21—A 23-year-old steel worker and a 15-year-old boy were the attractions today at the sixth annual Ohio Amateur Golf tournament.

Vic Subonis, Youngstown steel tester, knocked out a 74, three over par, to head the qualifying list. The boy Bob Campbell of Granville, shot an 82 to enter the contest.

Editor Edgar G. Brands, of the Sporting News, will come to Cincinnati to personally present Catcher Ernie Lombardi, Pitcher Johnny Vander Meer and General Manager Warren C. Giles with citations for having been selected as the outstanding men in baseball during 1938.

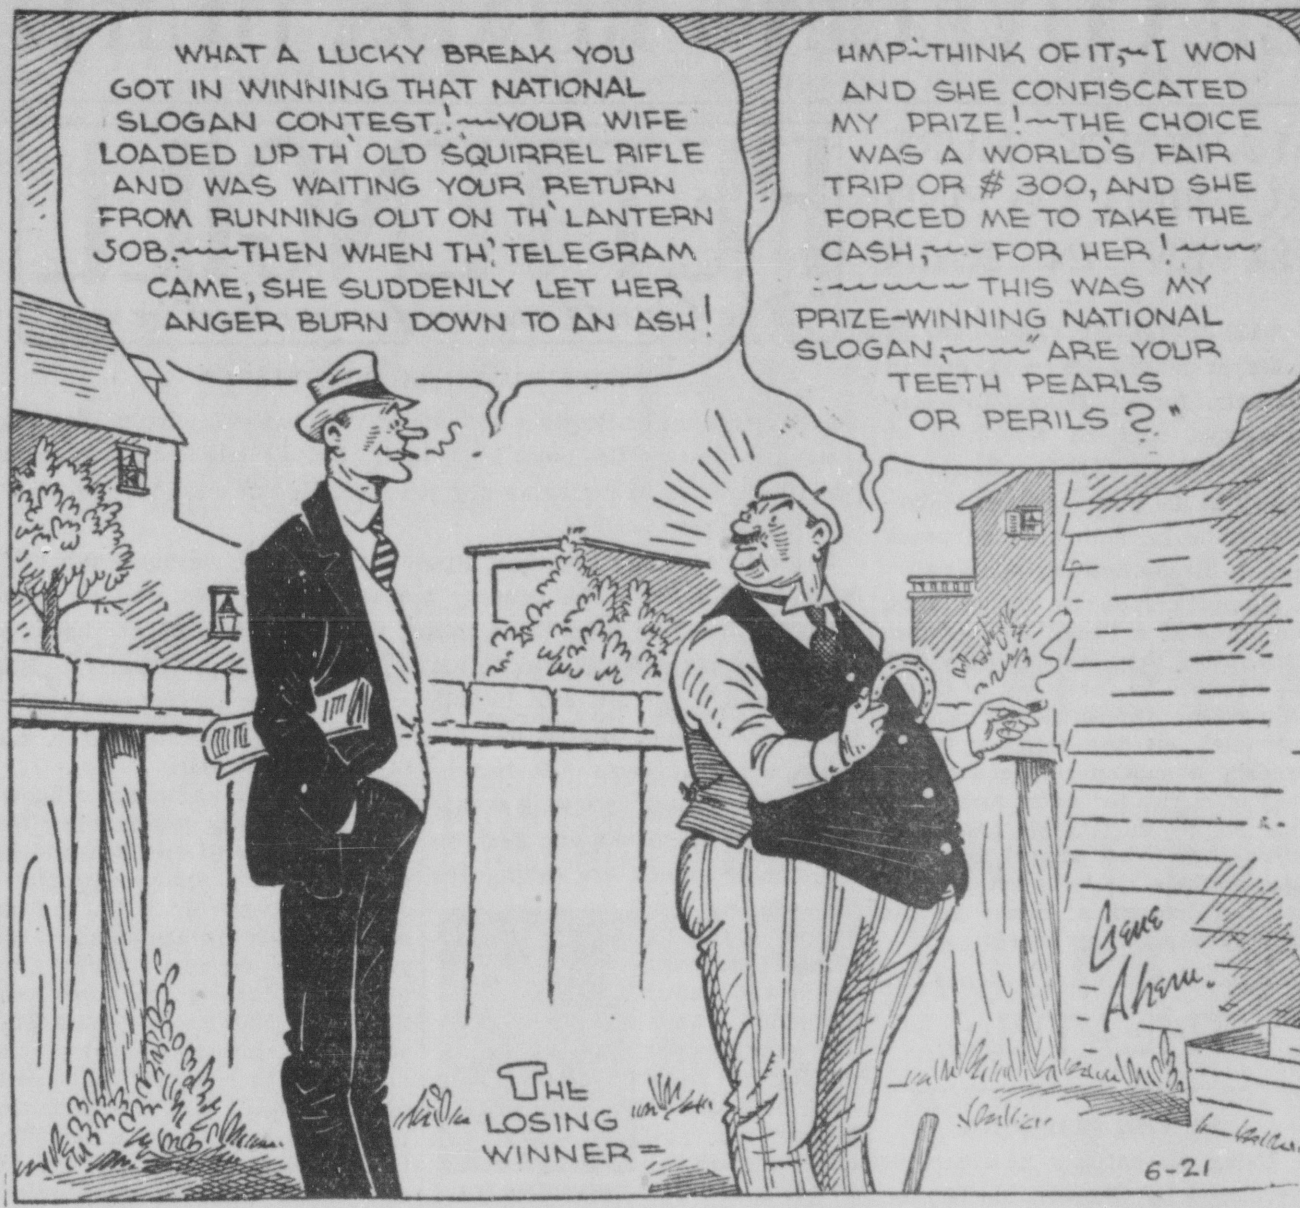

Lombardi will be presented with a shotgun, hand engraved with scenes of deer and wild boar, and which has gold plated firing pins, for having been named the most valuable player in the National League. In addition to being named the most valuable player, Lombardi led the league in batting.

Vander Meer, of course, will be honored for his pitching masterpiece of two successive no hit games, a feat never before accomplished in major league baseball. For Vander Meer, it will be his second scroll from the Sporting News, for he was named the outstanding minor league player of 1936, the year he was a sensation for the Durham Bulls of the Piedmont League. His feat that year was the fanning of 295 men and the winning of 19 games after joining the Bulls more than a month after the start of the season.

Giles is being cited for "His achievement of making the smallest city in the majors a prominent factor in baseball in the space of a year. Through his efficient, although self effacing efforts, Giles brought the Reds from the cellar to the first division by obtaining Bill McKechnie to lead the team and by establishing the morale of the squad through his tactful relations with the players."

FLOOD WATERS RECEDE AFTER COVERING ROADS, HURTING CROPS

Countians To Start Crop Jobs

Single Highway In District Closed To Traffic

Flood waters in Pickaway county were receding Wednesday. With no heavy rains reported along the Scioto river north of Circleville, the stream was expected to continue to fall rapidly.

One highway, the Canal road extending from Route 22 to Westfall remained closed to traffic Wednesday by flood waters. Routes 22 and 56 just west of the city, were still under water Wednesday but traffic on these highways has been closed due to work on the Route 22 improvement. Water covered the old Route 22.

Route 104 at Dewey park was flooded by Darby creek, Tuesday but traffic was not detoured. The water receded from the highway Tuesday evening. The Mackey Ford road in the northern section of the county was opened Wednesday. This highway was closed Tuesday.

Wheat Cutters Ready

Pickaway county farmers were anxious Wednesday to start wheat cutting, delayed by the recent heavy rains. Only a small portion of the wheat in the county has been cut. Some farmers believed they would be able to resume cutting Wednesday afternoon if weather conditions permitted. Combining is expected to start early next week if weather conditions permit.

Farm observers reported the recent heavy rains have caused no damage to crops. They say the rains will aid the corn crop and pastures. Little wind damage to wheat has been reported.

There is little hope for the crops flooded in the river lowlands, County Commissioner C. E. Wright indicated Wednesday.

"I don't believe there will be anything left in the low bottom lands," Mr. Wright said. He reported 50 acres of corn and 12 acres of wheat on his farm in Harrison township destroyed by the flood waters.

Mr. Wright said the river was falling rapidly Wednesday in the northern part of the county.

The rain in Circleville Tuesday night amounted to one tenth of an inch.

MAVERICK HURT RUNNING TO FIND HAVEN IN RAIN

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 21 — Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, former Democratic congressman, said he would be at his desk as usual today despite an injury to his back suffered yesterday while he addressed a peace plea to demonstrating strikers.

Maverick spoke to the strikers, employees at a Pecan shelling factory, after they had stoned police cars rushed to the scene to maintain order. After Maverick had prevailed on the strikers to be orderly, a sudden rain caused the mayor to run for cover and as he ran he fell, hurting his back. The injury was more painful than serious and the mayor several hours later addressed a dinner of the city park planning board.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Using an entirely new process developed by Robert de Grasse, cameraman, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers present a phantom dance number in their latest film musical, which is an embodiment of "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," which starts a four day run Sunday at the Cliftona.

Creating an illusion similar to that achieved in "The Return of Peter Grimm" and "Death Takes a Holiday," the process is said to be much more effective and spectacular.

The inspiration for the spirit dance is the fact that Astaire, in the role of Vernon Castle, has been killed in an airplane crash, while Miss Rogers, his wife, waits for him in a nearby hotel.

But the rendezvous with the woman he loves is kept by Astaire and the two dance in the gardens just as he had planned they would, just as he had planned they should.

The spectral dance is staged to the music of "Only When You're in My Arms," the song number which Astaire sings to Miss Rogers early in the picture.

Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan and Lew Fields play important supporting roles in this distinctive RKO Radio offering.

PETTENGILL "The Gentleman from Indiana"

"THIS BUSINESS OF RELIEF"

Cliff Woodrum of Virginia has one of the toughest jobs in Washington. And one of the most important. I don't intend to exaggerate when I say it is as messy as any job since Hercules turned two rivers into the Augean stables.

Several years ago President Roosevelt said that we must quit "this business of relief". The country applauded him. He was on sound ground. What he must have meant was that government should so encourage free enterprise as to make Federal relief unnecessary. But, unfortunately, we are still in this business of relief. Relief has become a big business. It has in important aspects become a racket also. Mr. Woodrum and his fellow-committeemen are taking the lid off to see some of the things that went on in the happy Hopkins days.

The country is getting the facts. And pressure groups are now attempting to discredit Mr. PETTENGILL.

Woodrum and his colleagues calling them Tories and reactionaries for adhering to policies President Roosevelt advocated only a few years ago.

These Congressmen should be given every support in their efforts to ascertain the truth. Few things are more important than to separate waste and graft from the necessary prevention of actual distress to any American who is unable to work or is willing to work, and can't find work.

I have just been reading "The New Deal and Old Rome," by H. J. Haskell. This book shows what happens when relief becomes a business—the business of politicians. We see there the progressive deterioration of government standards and the progressive destruction of the thrifty middle class who have to pay the bill. It was first enacted that wheat should be sold to the poor at half price which was then about 34c. Then someone ran for office on a platform to sell wheat to the poor at 4c. He was followed by another demagogue who proposed that the poor should get wheat for nothing. He was followed by another who proposed that everybody should get wheat for nothing. And then to encourage people to build, relief was made hereditary, somewhat like the subsidized tenants in slum clearance projects. If a father once got on relief his children and grandchildren acquired a vested interest in its continuance. Such was the business of relief 2000 years ago.

Democracy has many virtues but it has this grievous fault. How can it protect itself from pressure groups? We have spent 20 billion dollars for relief in the past 7 years and this year we are spending more than ever before. The overhead cost of administration and materials for relief has risen from 10 to 25 percent of the total. Relief costs have not declined during periods of business improvement. While over the full period the trend of relief rolls is down, the trend of relief cost is up. According to a study just completed by the National Economy League, the average monthly cost of work relief is $52.82 for wages and $25.55 for administration and materials. It appears from this that a greater percentage of total costs goes to the expense of administration and a smaller fraction to those in actual need of relief.

But the money cost is not all that is involved. On the day that President Roosevelt addressed the American Retail Federation where he changed "spending" into "lending", and "deficits" into "investments", Mr. Woodrum, also a member of the democratic party, said in a radio speech:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that a very determined effort is being made to mobilize and organize the unemployed people of America; to stir up strife and discontent and to manipulate this great body of our citizens as a great political factor in local, State, and National elections. That subversive influence control this movement there is not the shadow of a doubt. The disappointing part of it is that the administrative officials of W.P.A. have not felt called upon to do anything about it. Not only that, but in many instances they have, I fear, given comfort and encouragement to the movement. I believe in civil liberties. I believe that men should have a right to have their own political opinions, but I hold that it is inexcusable and indefensible to have any person upon the relief rolls or the work, relief rolls of this Government whose announced political philosophy is contrary to the form of government under which we live, and who believe in and support a political philosophy that advocates the overthrow of our present form of constitutional government."

If any Congressmen should be reelected in 1940 they are Woodrum and his committee colleagues, Democrat and Republican like. If we do not protect them and men like them from being liquidated by pressure groups, we may see in America the same fatal disease that destroyed Rome.

Countians To Start Crop Jobs

Single Highway In District Closed To Traffic

Flood waters in Pickaway county were receding Wednesday. With no heavy rains reported along the Scioto river north of Circleville, the stream was expected to continue to fall rapidly.

One highway, the Canal road extending from Route 22 to Westfall remained closed to traffic Wednesday by flood waters. Routes 22 and 56 just west of the city, were still under water Wednesday but traffic on these highways has been closed due to work on the Route 22 improvement. Water covered the old Route 22.

Route 104 at Dewey park was flooded by Darby creek, Tuesday but traffic was not detoured. The water receded from the highway Tuesday evening. The Mackey Ford road in the northern section of the county was opened Wednesday. This highway was closed Tuesday.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 21—"I would much sooner have been sentenced to the electric chair," declared Mrs. Lucille Anderson today following the decision of a jury that she be imprisoned for life for the murder of Eldon Coley, young Hot Springs grocery executive.

The jury deliberated three hours and 45 minutes before returning its verdict of guilty last night and the defendant, apparently taken by surprise, stormed in the courtroom that she was being made the victim "of the greatest outrage ever perpetrated on a human being."

Mrs. Anderson was the last of four persons to be convicted for the Coley murder. Her husband, the notorious "Smokey Joe" Anderson, was executed for the crime several months ago; another member of the Anderson gang, Alfred "Pug" Dickson, died a month ago, and Dickson's nephew is scheduled to die next Friday although in the latter's case a commutation to life imprisonment is believed probable.
